

Georg Weber

Director Information and communications technology (ICT),
European Patent Office

Georg Weber began his career at the European Patent Office (EPO) in 1988 as an examiner in the technical field of food chemistry, pharmaceuticals and cosmetics but also agriculture, mining and general process engineering. In 2003 he became director of a department for biomedical engineering. Since 2005 has been a director in the ICT field and followed the patent filing trends as well as the development of case law and patent procedures in this strong growing area over more than one decade. Currently, he is heading a department with almost 100 staff members dealing with inventions in the technical areas of computer and cyber security. He regularly represents the European Patent Office at large international events, conferences, visits to companies and industry.
